tetch of a Career Full of Person Triumph and Glory for the American Stage—The Early Life of Mr. Barrott.

New York, March 22.—Lawrence Bar-ett, the tragedian, died last night at the Vindsor Hotel. The demise was due to cert failure. The actor was unconscious out a short time before he died.

heart failure. The actor was unconscious but a short time before he died.

The story of the tragedian's last days, as told by Dr. Chambers, is as follows: On Wednesday evening he was called to see Mr. Barrett, who told him he had a cold and did not know whether to go to the theater or not. That night when he came home from the theater he had a severe chill. That was the beginning of the last sickness. Dr. Chambers was again sent for. When the doctor returned to the hotel he found his patient suffering from a high fever and having a rapid pulse. There were at that time, however, no symptoms of pneumonia, but at that time he suspected that the disease would develop later. On Thursday morning the much feared symptoms of pneumonia appeared. The physician then realized Mr. Barrett's critical condition and asked for consultation. Dr. H. F. Walker was accordingly called in. Mrs. Barrett was at the time in Boston, and a dispatch was at once sent, telling her of the serious "condition of her husband. She came to this city Thursday evening and went immediately to the Windsor Hotel. Dr. J. P. Oliver, of Bacion, who has been Mr. Barrett's family physician for a long time, was also sent for, and came at once to take part in the consultation at the actor's bedside. At the consultation the case was diagnosed as a very grave case of pneumonia, but at that time it was believed that monia, but at that time it was believed that if there were no other complications the sick man might yet recover. But the unfortunate fact was that these complications did exist. For two years Mr. Barrett has been a sufferer from throat disease.

When the time came for the consultation the sick man was in a semi-conscious condition and had to be roused for the examination and would lapse back again into unconsciousness. He was unconscious for from fifteen to twenty minutes before he died. The end was very audden. At the death bed were present Mrs. Barrett, Dr. Chambers, the manager for Booth and Barrett, and the nurse.

Mr. Barrett has two daughters, now in Europe, one being the wife of Mary Anderson's brother. The funeral will take blace, probably, in Boston, and the manager of Booth and Barrett will have full charge of all arrangements.

Although the river banks were lined with many thousands of persons, though the usual fleet of barges and steamboats was moored along the course, and though the numerous styles of vehicles were represented here, there and everywhere, the attendance, as a whole, did not equal that of former years, owing to the early hour at which the race was rowed, and to the prevalence of a sleet storm in the forenoon and bitter cold weather. However, old Father Thamee's broad bosom was crowded with various crafts from the dingey to the gaudy barge, the scene being happily now and then lit up by streaks of flashing sunshine.

then lit up by streaks of flashing sunshine.

OXFORD WINS THE TOSS.

Oxford won the toss and chose the Middlesex, or north side. Cambridge had to be content with the Surrey or southern course. The rival eights were started prettily and successfully at 11:09 a. m. sharp. As the crews bent to their work hail and snow was falling upon them in no pleasant fashion, and a strong, cross northeast wind was raising a very lumpy aca. Both crews had been expecting bad weather and consequently they both utilized presty high washboards.

CHICAGO, March 21.—A special dispatch from Eric, Pa., says: United States detectives brought to Eric yesterday Chauncey dispatch than catchestroke than Oxford, and at the cleaner, both longs the Cambridge at first got away with the lead, pulling a shorter, smarter, somewhat quicker and more catchestroke than Oxford, and at the cleaner, both longs the Cambridge at first got away with the lead, pulling a shorter, smarter, somewhat quicker and more catchestroke than Oxford, and at the cleaner, but he can be considered in the construction of th quicker and more catch-stroke than Oxford, and at the claspers' boat-house the Cambridge boat was ahead. The Oxford bent to her work, pulling the long dragging, powerful stroke peculiar to the oarsmen of that university. This stroke soon told and Oxford was leading slightly at the Craven cottage, six furlongs from the start. At the crab tree, one mile and three furlongs from the start Oxford lead by a length. But under the influence of a period of bright sunshine, which succeeded the hail and snow, the Cambridge crew spurted neatly and galiantly, pulling their short stroke quicker, with plenty of vim and with a good grip on the water which surged their boat ahead in fine style. This effort redoubled the cheer from the river banks, and at the soap-works, one mile and three and a half furlongs from the start, the two boats were apparently on a level.

A MAGNIFICENT SIGHT.

At the Doves, two miles from the start, Oxford led slightly, Cambridge still sticking to her work in magnificent style in spite of the creeping up of their dark blue opponents. The cheering and excitement was intense, and a dead heat was looked upon as a possibility, not to say a probability.

upon as a possibility, not to say a probability.

The struggle in the last quarter of a mile of the course will long be remembered in the aquatic world. It was simply magnificent. Oxford had all the work she could do cut out for her as the boats rounded the Barnes bend of the river. Cambridge was rowing pluckily and with plenty of strength, but Oxford passed over the line first by a quarter of a length, amid intense and almost indescribable excitement, winning the grandest race rowed on the Thames river in many years. Oxford's time was twenty-two minutes. The betting was nominally three to one on Oxford.

Sr. Louis, March 21.—One of the most daring robberies that has been committed in St Louis for some time occurred last night. Kate Burg, claiming Kansas City as her home, entered the jewelry store of Henry Yost, 1403 Olive street, and asked to see some diamonds. The clerk placed a tray before her, from which she selected one, and going to the door as if desirous of examining it, dashed out and started on the run toward Washington evenue. After the clerk had recovered from his surprise he started in pursuit and caught her at Fifteenth and Morgan streets, seven blocks away. She was turned over to an officer and locked up. Lack of money, she says, forced her to commit the robbery.

The commissioners will appoint six firemen Monday, and the appointments will stop there for a month or so, or perhaps longer. The idea is not to make such removals as will in any way interfere with the efficient working of the department. The police appointments will come later on.

Until now the fire chief and superintendent of police could purchase about anything that was needed in the two departments. Of course it required a little scheming to evade certain ordinances, but the schemers were always on hand in council. However, this is all changed now. The commissioners have inaugarated a new system that is a check all along the line. Every thing wanted must be procured by a requisition on the commissioners who say where the purchase shall be made if made at all. The seller must furnish duplicate itemized statements to the commissioners are not compelled to accept them as correct. Thus the power of a fire chief to purchase a team of horses as "repairs" is gone.

The appointment of a building inspector seems to meet general approval, and the commissioners will appoint one just as soon as a competent man can be found and the means of naving him is acceptained. Presi-

The National Pageant.

The second presentation of this entertainment last night was superior to the first, and was enjoyed by a large andience. A number of the tableaux were repeated in response to encores. This effort of the ladies of Roberts Park is a marked success, and the entertainment of to-night promises to be very generously patronized. The teachers and officers of the public schools have taken a great interest in the Pageant, and in accordance with their request the management has made special arrangements for the admission of school a children to-night. The price of tickets for them has been reduced to 25 cents, and where children are accompanied by their parents this will admit them to reserved seats.

The Spirit of the Mob.

In the consideration of the New Orleans massacre, one point must not be lost ight of, viz: that while it may be possible that some of the men killed were not the actual murderers of Hennessy, there is no doubt whatever that they were all members of the secret society known as the Mafia. This is an organization banded It is hardly probable that any of the together for the avowed purpose of assautialians massacred at New Orleans had sination. into this division of the Mafia.

The people of New Orleans waited with patience and forbearance for the law to perform its work. The results indicated beyond a doubt that the Mafia not only had laid its red hand upon the private citizen, but that it held the courts of justice by the throat. To have submitted without protest to the finding of a terrorized and subsidized jury, would have placed them at the mercy of this organized band of assassins whose motto is, "Slay and spare not." Emboldened by their success in escaping punishment, their contempt for the restraints of the law would have been bold and defiant, and there would have been no safety for any the law would have been hold and defiant, and there would have been no safety for any person who incurred their enmity. It was not solely to avenge the murder of Hennessy that the citizens of New Orleans took the law into their own hands, nor simply to satisfy vengeance against certain individuals, but it was an uprising against, the Maña and a determination to make such an example of %s more prominent members as should serve as a warning to the entire organization at once and forever.

LADY COOK, of England, notorious in this country as Tennie C. Claffin, has made a flying trip to New York, remaining long enough, however, to create a mild but characteristic sensation. The business which brought her here and for which she will return again in June, is to arrange for a women's convention in Chicago during the World's Fair. This is to be "a congress interested in the emancipation of women from the alavery of marriage!" Shades of Victoria Woodhull! Can not something be done to put a stop to this movement? Lady Cook declares that her plan has received the co-operation and indorsement of scores of prominent English ladies, and is to be an international affair. A daughter, nearly as old, appears with a rush from the living-rooms, as though long and varied skirmlishes with solemn-visaged but ingenous youths had made her alert for device or reprisal. A still younger matron, perhaps a widow, is pothering among the boxes and shelves; and prim, peachy and prudent, a young miss, conacious of her value as a trade-magnet where there are a thousand lade to know a pretty face when they see it, comes out of the hall-lights, a radiant, wheedling presence. In every one of these by-street shops the shillings and pence of the Rugby lads are the entire quarry? and everything dear to a hoy's heart from cricket-bats to leaden "pasties" comprise the stock-in-trade. Queer old shop-keepers all, are they; quaint as from the last-century picture-books; and they still keep the coin of the realm in leathern bags, and test suspicious six-pences and thippenny bits with their teeth, here in Rugby.

Near the market square, along these by-streets, are many curious old nests of homes; little stone pens with tiny windows, heavy overhauging gables, chimnoys a fourth as large as the houses, strange carved casements, low and narrow doors strong enough to withstand a slege, all covered by masses of lyves or packed and dense that they seem like habitations out out of verdure-matted rock. Everywhere are giant old sycamores and elms; and you irresistibly follow one of these sweet old streets out on its Londonward way, to catch with "Tow Brown's" eyes the glimpses which thrilled his boyish heart, when he came that autumn morning on that memorable journey from Islington with old "Blow-hard," the guard, for a companion, and drank in with innocent intoxication the desperate and lawiess tales of the brave Rugby inds and their destructive pen-shooters. Very different are the house-furnishing and home decoration of to-day from those of fifteen years ago, when one bought first a carpet and put it down; next the set of furniture, and put it in; and finally the curtains—and, voils! the room was finished and rendy for occupancy. A room nowadays is considered as a picture, or rather as a series of pictures, with a picturesque grouping here, an "arrangement of color" there. Each corner may be treated differently and with artistic effect. We give as an illustration a

In the school there are now 155 girls; in the prison are near sixty women. A pleasant-faced officer of the institution took a big bunch of keys and led the reporter all up and down the great establishment. Everywhere were cleanliness and order evident. It was a kind of aggressive quality which seemed to demand notice and comment. Down in the basement of that wing of the building occupied by the school, is a big kitchen from which emanated odors of such power and fragrance that like a fly, buzzing round and round a shining web before it makes the fatal plunge, the reporter wandered up and down the corridors and stairs, all the while drawing nearer the kitchen, nor paused until he stood in front of a great range which roared like a blast furnace as it cooked the supper.

When a girl becomes very obstreperous and noisy she is put in the dungeon, and her diet is reduced to a minimum, namely, bread and water. This treatment commonly hurries repentance along at a rapid rate, although sometimes girls have declared they would stay in there forever rather than give up, and have actually braved the darkness and silence for days and days. They always submit, eventually, however, and it is only a question of time.

There have been emergencies when a good, strong stream of icy water from a hose was found to be necessary and highly effective. Such a crisis was almost but not quite reached one day about the list of February. One of the board of managers was visiting the school, and if there is any time when all the inmates should be on their good behavior, it is, of course, during a visit from any of the managers. On this occasion one of the girls was "impudent" to the visitor, and the visitor promptly ordered her to be locked up. She ran upstairs and her friends gathered around her, and in a moment there was intense axcitement everywhere. The officers and guards quickly locked the doors of the various rooms, thus keeping the girls separated. They accessed and tried to escape at the win.

Among the firms that have contributed to bring about this result is that of Holliday & Wyon, the leading wholesale manufacturers of harness, saddles, collars, etc.

They are now located in the magnificent four-story and basement brick building on the northwest corner of South Pennsylvania and Georgia streets. They are now much the largest manufacturers in this line of goods in the State. This building is one of the largest, most commodious and thoroughly equipped establishments in the West, being supplied with all the latest and most approved machinery and appliances known to the trade.

The main floor is used for their office, salesroom, leather department, findings, etc. Here are displayed an infinite variety of harness, which sell from $4.50 to $150 per set; saddles, whips and robes, and every variety of goods usually found in such establishments.

The second floor is the stock and cutting department. All of their harness and strap work is cut from the full length of oaktanned leather.

The third floor is occupied by the manufacturing department, and contains the engine, as well as a number of the heavy Campbell lock-stitch sewing machines, which are much more rapid and do far better work than can be done by hand.

The fourth floor is devoted to the manufacture of collars, where the only collar stuffing machines in the State are in use.

The basement is occupied by the shipping and stock department. The various stories are connected by hydraulic elevators. They employ over seventy-five men, and their business exceeds a quarter of a million ench year.

hides and leather, as prices of goods are no higher than a year ago, but while the buye s are cautious they are numerous, and the shops are fairly well supplied with orders. The iron trade shows no change, buyers believing that as soon as the demand for consumption increases again, no strikes nor shut-downs will restrict production. Rails are stiffer and the demand for structural iron a trifle better. The glass trade is hetter. The glass trade is firm, but copper weaker. The general average of all prices is still advancing, having risen ½ per centior the past week.

"The money rates are easier at most interior cities, including Chicago and Boston. At New York rates have changed but little—2½ to 3 per cent. on call—but there is some difficulty in obtaining commercial loans. The Treasury has put out $2,600,000 more than it has taken in during the week, beside issuing $1,000,000 more silver notes.

"The business faillures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days were 275, as compared with 273 last week."

In July, 1833, the first newspaper was ssued at Fort Wayne, and it was called the Sentinel. Thomas Tigar and Samuel V. B. Noel were the editors and publishers. Hon, I. D. G. Nelson purchased the plant in 1840, but in eighteen months sold it again to Mr. Tigar. In 1880 the Sentinel passed to the control of its present owner, E. A. K. Hackett, who still continues in charge.

The board of managers of the Mishawak Orphans' Home, which Laporte is trying to capture, and has partially succeeded headed by Mrs. J. M. Studebaker, of South headed by Mrs. J. M. Studebaker, of South Bend, have submitted a report giving a scathing review of the course pursued by Mrs. Julia E. Work, the matron, in her effort to transfer the institution to Laporte. The fact is brought out that the institution was not founded by Mrs. Work, but by P. C. Perkins, of Mishawaka, who enlisted a number of South Bend and Mishawaka ladies in the enterprise and employed Mrs. ladies in the enterprise, and employed Mrs Work as matron.

"Uncle Tommy" Worth, of Plainfield, is thought to be one of the oldest printers in Indiana. He is a native of Nantucket by birth in 1809, and, when twelve years old, he began type-setting on the Nantucket Independent. He removed to Indiana in 1835 and built the first house in Plainfield. In 1842 he started the Mooresville Chronicle, and three years later he removed to Martinsville and founded the Morgan County Gazette, which he edited until 1851. He then established a hardware store, and at the age of forty-five learned to be a tinner. After the war he retired from business and settled at Plainfield.

Several years ago Henry T. Jones, of Clinton county, and Miss Laura B. Tarkington, of Kokomo, were united in marriage; three children were the result of the union, and the family prospered until last suntmer, when all were stricken with typhoid fever, and there was a long and painful illness. During their illness the wife and children were taken home by her parents, while Mr. Jones was transferred to his own people. Mr. Jones labored under the delusion that his wife had neglected him, and he applied for divorce, but afterward withdrew it and sought a reconciliation. Mrs. Jones offered to receive him at the home of her parents, but would not go to her father-in-law's home, and Mr. Jones thereupon sued for possession of the children. Yesterday the court ruled that he was entitled to the oldest son, and the lad was torn from his mother's arms and transferred to Clinton county.

The war upon self-binders continues in Daviess county, and the vandals, in trying to wipe out these labor-saving machines, have burned twenty-three barns within the past eighteen months, and eighty-even horses have been cremated besides other live stock. Property valued in excess of $50,000 has been destroyed, and the Washington Gazette says, with reference thereto: "The record is without a parallel in the history of Indiana, and perhaps there is not a county in the United States where the spirit of organized incendiarism is so manifested as in Daviess county. No farmer goes to bed at night with the least assurance that his barn and farm machinery will escape the flames. He is so fearful of results that his stock is often barred out of the barns lest they be imprisoned in a roaring, crackling furnace before the sun

For the second time Capt. Daniel Drew, of Lafayette, is on trial for his life for the murder of John Mackessy. The crime was committed in August, 1887. Drew and Mackessy were warm personal friends and hard drinkers. It was Mackessy's custom to make frequent calls upon the home of Drew and wife, and on the night in question Mrs. Drew joined in the dissipation until the supplies were exhausted, and Drew was sent for a can of beer. Upon his return the murder was committed, Drew killing Mackessy with a hatchet, and also attempted to kill Mrs. Drew. No explanation was ever offered for the murder, and on the first trial Drew was given a life sentence. "Mr. Darke's friend, by Jupiter!"

"Eh, what do you mean!" asked Choop, sharply, with his enger ferret-look, that changed him at once to another man. Three minutes sufficed to put him in possession of all I knew. Mr. Choop gave an almost imperceptible jerk with his thumb and a tall, ungainly-looking man, having the appearance of a farm laborer in his best clothes, lounged up, and I recognized limothy, Mr. Choop's confidential subordinate.

Mr. Choop sent Timothy off to No. 35 to make certain inquiries, then went himself to the booking office to ask the clerk whether he remembered to what station Mr. Darke and his companion were booked. The clerk booked so many passengers by that train that he could not contively remember, but he thinks through to London. Mr. Choop then desired me to accompany him to the telegraph office. The 9 o'clock train had hardly got half-way to London yet. By consulting a time-table Mr. Choop found out ou what part of the line the train ought to be, so at his request I telegraphed to the station at which it would next ston, giving a brief description of Mr. Darke and his companion, distring the train to be assarched on its arrival, and the individuals in question to be detained. In a quarter of an hour we'received a reply: "The train has been searched, but no individuals answering the description given by were in it."

"Telegraph if to each station where the train has stopped," said Mr. Choop, "till you discover at which of them the man and woman got out."

So I telegraphed to four stations without success, but the fifth answered:

The only sympathy and help she can surely count upon, or that is worth speaking of, is that which she receives from those self same women who "sit in stuffy conventions," even at the sacrifice of their complexions. ous mixture of former styles and fashions, with several new features, but with no very radical departure in style, contour or garniture.

The sailor hat again appears among fashionable head covernings, but it is lower of crown and smaller of brim than ever, and has thus dwindled to a style fit only for young children.

Lace is the prevailing trimming of the day. It is seen upon the toques, it forms the basis of tiny muffs. It adorns glovetops, and is used for flounces upon the skirts and bodices of street dresses.

Jackets and caps appear to be equally favored this spring, and the choice between the styles is merely a matter of taste. The choice of material and garniture is a matter of means, as the range in these regards is almost limitless.

A very forest of fancy pins is seen. All the small vegetables, such as peas in the pod, beans, tiny lettuce leaves, small beets and ministure sprays of celery stalks with fluted gold tops are seen upon hats and at the neck of gowns.

The increasing desire to raise above law and rule is noticeable not only in dress and its accessories, but in the matter of the coffure. Few women dress their hair nowadays to suit the features of their neighbors or friends, but in accordance with their own particular cast of countenance. As a result, there is a pleasing medley of styles to be seen, and no one fashion appears to take the lead.

A new spring corsage has cross pleats on the front, drawn together at the center of the chest, and losing themselves toward the arm-holes. The same effect is repeated at the back, but it is not pretty. In some cases late or earn batists embroidery is introduced at the top, the edge of the lace being concealed under the top pleat. This gives a graceful effect of a bodies with a yoke emerging at the top.

An enterprising dressmaker has invented a spring for the high-shouldered sleeves, which will keep the shoulder puffs in place, though the material be ever so light and gauxy, or every so heavy. The sleeves,

ONE OF THE WRIST MANACLES.

[A, the canopy which drops over him; B, floor of stage.]

At about the same time that Hertz took the wonder to London another man brought the secret to America, and it came into Professor Herrmann's possession. He named it "Strobeika" to fit a little story which he tells, gave it all the advantages that fine scenery, grewsome green lights and silken draperies can bestow, and has made a decided hit with it wherever it has been seen. Here is how the trick looks to the audience:

The curtain opens slowly and discloses a scene representing a dungeon. In the center of the stage, quite near the back scene, stand four metal posts about eight feet tall, and set about eight feet apart the long way and four feet the short. A plank an inch and a quarter thick is suspended a yard above the stage by slender brass chains from the four poles in full view of the audience. A man is then stretched upon the plank; his wrists and arms are manacled and locked by a committee from the audience, his neek is inclosed in a steel collar and also locked to the plank. At a signal a short curtain or eanopy comes down just far enough to hide the man lying on the plank, but permitting a full view underneath, clear back to the scenery which forms the rear of the stage. In about a minute the curtain rises again, and in place of the plank a beautiful young girl clad in the uniform of a page. At the same instant the man whom the audience had seen manacled to the plank a moment before is seen running down one of the aisles of the theater. line to the other, and even up to yesterday, when The Indianapolis News published the fact that the papers had been signed, the denials were still coming in. There is no doubt of the sale. It will be sixty days or more before the reorganiza ion takes place, and when it does it is safe to say that there will be iew of the present officials of the New Monon left. The representatives of the Brice-Thomas syndicate, which purchased the road, are making a trip over the road, and are to-day at Chicago. They will visit this city Monday or Tues-day.

Still Doing Business Many of the roads are complaining of the duliness of business, and anticipating how the business will increase when the spring floods have come and gone. But in the published earnings of the different lines the do not show up so badly. Taking 145 roads as a criterion of the whole business, and the list embraces many of those that have suffered the heaviest losses during the present year, it is found that the total gain in earnings for the month has been over $1,300,000 as compared with February, 1890, or more than 4 per cent., or 111/2 per cent. 'over February, 1889, the earnings of these roads for February, 1890, having been $3,000,000 in excess of those of 1889. The increase was made by less than two-thirds of the entire number, as more than one-third of those reporting showed a falling off. Their loss was largely due to the failure of the crops in some sections of the country. It was contributed to somewhat by the heavy floods which swept over a number of the roads. on the board, just before the curiain comes down.

The second picture shows the board with the manacles on it. Each manacle is hinged firmly to the board at one end. Its free end contains an opening which, when the manacle closes down, sips over a staple set in a metal plate. A padlock is inserted in the staple above the end of the manacle, and locked, and there you are. In this explanation be sure to remember that the staples are set in metal plates, each plate having a screw in each corner, apparently to fix it firmly to the board. A genius with a mania for figures makes this calculation: No matter what the rate of speed may be, for every one round of the driving wheels a locomotive will give four puffs—two out of each cylinder, the cylinders being double. The sizes of driving wheels vary, some being eighteen, nineteen, twenty, and even twenty-two feet in circumference; though they are generally made in about twenty. The express speed varies from fifty-four to fifty-eight miles an hour. Taking the average circumference of the driving wheel to be twenty feet, and the speed per hour to be fifty miles, a locomotive will give, going at express speed, 880 puffs per minute, or 52,800 puffs per minute, or 52,800 puffs per hour, the wheels revolving 13,200 times in sixty minutes, giving 1,056 puffs per mile. Therefore, an express going from London to Liverpool, a distance of 201% miles, will throw out 213,048 puffs before arriving at its destination. During the tourist season of 1888 the journey from London to Edinburgh was accomplished in less than eight hours, the distance being 401 miles, giving a speed throughout of fifty miles an hour. A locomotive of an express train from London to Edinburg, subject to the above conditions, will give 423,456 puffs.

ONE OF THE WRIST MANACLES.

[A, hinge of manacle; B, opening in manacle which shuts down over staple; C, staple; D E F, outline of bolts inside the board, which iasten the staple plates in position.]

The third picture shows one of the manacles with the staple, over which it is about to shut down, and the metal plate in which the staple is fixed.

When the man takes his place on the board the manacles are shut down over his wrists, ankles and neck, and locked by the committee from the audience, the committee retaining the keys, locks or manacles, since it is not at all necessary to the deception shout the keys, locks or manacles, since it is not at all necessary to the deception that there should be.

The secret on which the trick turns is that the board on which the man lies manacled is hollow. The metal plates in which the staples are fixed are fastened in place, not by the screws, but only by a contrivance miside the hollow board, a sort of bolt which locks each plate firmly in place.

by the heavy floods which swept over a number of the roads. Traffic on the Southern Pacific was suspended for several days and much damage was done its roadbed by these floods. Roads in the vicinity of the Dhio river also suffered heavily from freshet and flood and the trains on the New York Central had for quite a while to plow their way through fields of ice. Superintendent Jones made a report to the Board of School Commisioners last night, which showed that the euroliments of pupils in the public schools in January and February exceeded the enrollment for the corresponding months of 1800 by 635 and 650 respectively. The great war scene, the Battle of Atlanta, has been sold, and will be taken to Chattanooga on or before the 1st of May. Thousands of people in this city have never seen this realistic representation of a battle. Other thousands, who have seen it, should visit it again, as this will be the last opportunity of looking upon an exhibition of this kind in this city. Parents should bring their children that they may see just how great battles are fought, and how brave men gave up their lives in defense of their country. The price of admission has been reduced to 10 cents. How easy it was to rid yourself of face pimples and blotches, you would
